

Monday 16 March 2009

The Consulting Association database

A spokesperson for the ICO said:

“Some people who have worked in the construction industry may want to know whether their personal details were held on Ian Kerr’s database. Following our intervention Mr Kerr has ceased trading and as people may have been denied employment because of the activities of The Consulting Association, the ICO has taken the unusual step of taking control of the database. From today we will be able to provide people with the records held about them, and in order to allow people enough time to contact us to get their information we will hold the material for the next six months.

People who think they have been affected should ring us on 08456 30 60 60 and be ready to give us their name, date of birth and National Insurance number. We are open weekdays between 9am and 5pm.”

For all media enquires, please contact the ICO press office on 0207 025 7580.